St. Vincent de Paul

In the Gospel, Jesus says: "There is no need for them to go away; give them some food yourselves," and taking the five loaves and two fish, he blest them and gave them to the disciples to feed the crowd. Like the story of the "loaves and fish", this month through your gifts to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul we were able to assist many families by helping with utility and rent bills, etc. Thank You!

Recommended CD of the Week

CONTRACEPTION: WHY NOT? – PROF. JANET E. SMITH
Contraception is such an accepted fixture in our culture that a serious challenge is indeed rare. In this presentation, Prof. Smith provokes her audience to give serious consideration to questions regarding the relationship between contraception, divorce, abortion, poverty, and other social ills. She presents compelling evidence that couples who accept children as a gift from God and who use natural family planning, have happier marriages with dramatically lower divorce rates than the general population.

Bibles Needed

The RCIA gives instruction to adults, learning or inquiring about our faith. To do this, we need Bibles! We are looking to you, our parish family, to help us in this task. Every bible donated will be inscribed with donors name and given to one of the candidates, and they will be asked to remember that person in their prayers. Last year your response was overwhelming and we are extremely grateful for your generosity. If you are interested in donating a copy of the New American Bible please leave a $5.00 donation at the rectory to the attention: Ana Pauze.

Seven Reasons Not to Marry

(Taken from the USCCB website, ForYourMarriage.org, with permission.) by Susan Stith, Family Life Director, Diocese of Altoona-Johnstown

The decision to marry is the biggest decision that most people make in a lifetime. Following is a list of danger signs. If any of these are present in your relationship now, it is best to postpone the marriage until the issue is resolved. Marriage itself will not make these problems disappear. In fact, these problems almost always get worse after marriage.

Marrying to get out of the house. This is simply trading one set of problems for another. Other options exist to get away from a troubled home. A counselor can help you find them.

No one better will ask me to marry him/her. This kind of thinking suggests that you don't think much of yourself. People who think this way aren't sure enough of themselves to hold their own in marriage and are generally unhappy when they do find their true self. Postponing or canceling your wedding is a good idea. Some good counseling can help, too.

It's just time to get married. Actually, what is needed is the right time AND the right person.

Being hit, slapped, threatened or intimidated, verbally put down, or forced to do things you don't want to do by your partner. Being treated like this is wrong and you should not put up with it. This is not the normal way that engaged or married couples relate to one another. Marriage is based on respect, not fear and force. Don't be fooled by your partner's promise to stop.

You or your partner are dependent on drugs and/or alcohol. Some of the symptoms of dependence include:

- One of you uses drugs or alcohol to escape from problems or worries.
- Getting drugs or alcohol is always on your mind.
- You can't have fun or relax without drugs or alcohol.
- You become careless with important relationships.
- You drink alone or in secret.

A person dependent on drugs and alcohol is not a free person. Their love affair is with the bottle or drugs—not with you!

You and your partner have major items which you avoid talking about because it might upset your relationship. For example: children, money management, division of responsibility for home and children, whether to keep both careers, religious identity of children in an interfaith marriage. You need to talk about all important issues openly before marriage. The wedding ceremony itself will not eliminate the issues or the effects of your disagreements. Consider enlisting the help of a priest, minister, or counselor if these issues seem too threatening to handle alone.

Marriage just seems like the next logical step. This sometimes happens to couples who are living together. They slide into marriage not because they have fully explored the idea of a permanent commitment and freely choose that for themselves, but because getting married is the next thing to do. Or they slide into marriage to fix a relationship that is limping along, thinking that having their families' or church's stamp of approval will fix their relationship. If this describes your relationship, slow down and look more carefully at what marriage is. Are you ready, willing, and able to fulfill its responsibilities?

I will add an eighth to the list above...

"Leopards don't change their spots." Though there are exceptions, your prospective spouse is who they are and not who you want or wish them to be. You have to accept them as they are. If he/she is controlling, lazy, messy, irresponsible, self-centered, un-motivated... you have to be prepared to live with those negative qualities "until death do us part." Marriage will not change anyone's personality. Marry someone for who they are, good points and bad, because (with the help of God) you are willing to be committed to the "whole package," and not just the good qualities about them. And remember, your prospective spouse is committing to the whole you, good points and bad—lucky them!

Love and marriage is all about giving. May our blessed Lord guide us all in His ways of unselfish love.

In Christ,
Fr. Greg
