Infallibility

One of the most misunderstood doctrines (teachings) of the Church is that of Papal Infallibility (meaning “without error”). Up until about 50 years ago, most people never read or heard what the Holy Father had to say except for every so often when the Successor to St. Peter might have had something of importance to communicate to Catholics or to all the world. Assuredly, throughout the 19 plus centuries of Christianity there were popes who reigned for any number of years who never made a single theological or pastoral pronouncement of gravity that was recorded. What they had to say never went much further than those who physically heard them speak. Today’s experience in the second decade of the 21st Century is a much different story.

In these days of instantaneous global media communication, one might be led to erroneously believe that everything and anything the Pope says is of infallible weight. In reality, papal infallibility (the extraordinary magisterium) exists within a very narrow scope and is rarely employed; the last time was by Pope Pius XII in 1950. When a doctrine is declared infallible it is never some “new” teaching being declared, but rather to the contrary, something that has to do with the development of a doctrine which the Church has always believed and celebrated at the very least “in seed form;” like those of our blessed Mother’s Immaculate Conception (1854) and also her Assumption into Heaven (1950), which the Church had believed and celebrated for many centuries. To use a classic example, the pope cannot declare a white sheet of paper to be black. Such a ridiculous statement would have nothing to do with faith or morals, and if the pope did say such a thing, we should rightly say that he is out of his mind!

The First Vatican Ecumenical Council (December 8, 1869 – October 20, 1870) has defined as “a divinely revealed dogma” that “the Roman Pontiff, when he speaks ex cathedra (“from the chair” [of Peter]) — that is, when in the exercise of his office as pastor and teacher of all Christians he defines, by virtue of his supreme Apostolic authority, a doctrine of faith or morals to be held by the whole Church — is, by reason of the Divine assistance promised to him in blessed Peter, possessed of that infallibility with which the Divine Redeemer wished His Church to be endowed in defining doctrines of faith and morals; and consequently that such definitions of the Roman Pontiff are irreformable (cannot be changed) of their own nature and not by reason of the Church’s consent.” For the correct understanding of this definition it is to be noted that:

- What is claimed for the pope is infallibility merely, not impeccability (that he is without sin) or inspiration (like the guidance of the Holy Spirit communicated to the human authors of Sacred Scripture.)
- The infallibility claimed for the pope is the same in its nature, scope, and extent as that which the Church as a whole possesses; his ex cathedra teaching does not have to be ratified by the Church’s in order to be infallible.
- infallibility is not attributed to every doctrinal act of the pope, but only to his ex cathedra teaching; and the conditions required for ex cathedra teaching are mentioned in the Vatican decree:
 - The pontiff must teach in his public and official capacity as pastor and doctor of all Christians, not merely in his private capacity as a theologian, preacher or allocutionist, nor in his capacity as a temporal prince or as a mere ordinary (chief bishop) of the Diocese of Rome. It must be clear that he speaks as spiritual head of the Church universal.
 - Then it is only when, in this capacity, he teaches some doctrine of faith or morals that he is infallible.
 - Further it must be sufficiently evident that he intends to teach with all the fullness and finality of his supreme Apostolic authority; in other words that he wishes to determine some point of doctrine in an absolutely final and irrevocable way, or to define it in the technical sense. These are well-recognized formulas by means of which the defining intention may be manifested.
 - Finally for an ex cathedra decision it must be clear that the pope intends to bind the whole Church. To demand internal assent from all the faithful to his teaching under pain of incurring spiritual shipwreck (naufragium fidei) according to the expression used by Pius IX in defining the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin. Theoretically, this intention might be made sufficiently clear in a papal decision which is addressed only to a particular Church; but in present day conditions, when it is so easy to communicate with the most distant parts of the earth and to secure a literally universal promulgation of papal acts, the presumption is that unless the pope formally addresses the whole Church in the recognized official way, he does not intend his doctrinal teaching to be held by all the faithful as ex cathedra and infallible.

It should be observed in conclusion that papal infallibility is a personal and incommunicable charisma, which is not shared by any pontifical tribunal. It was promised directly to Peter, and to each of Peter’s successors in the primacy, but not as a prerogative the exercise of which that could be delegated to others. Hence doctrinal decisions or instructions issued by the Roman congregations, even when approved by the pope in the ordinary way, have no claim to be considered infallible. To be infallible they must be issued by the pope himself in his own name according to the conditions already mentioned as requisite for ex cathedra teaching.

Catholics for Freedom of Religion Educating and Advocating for Freedom of Religion for All

June 29, 2014
America's First Freedom: Religious Liberty

"What some saw as a drift toward imposing a pagan world view on us all is in fact a determined, well organized and well healed effort to change the social mores of our country and to impose their secular values and their anti religious biases on the lives of millions of God fearing Americans." Bishop William Murphy

As the media surrounds us with assurances that we Catholics are intolerant and heartless when we hold to the beliefs of our faith and its teachings, and as the secular view is presented as warm and compassionate, remember the warning of one of America's founders, Samuels Adams, "How strangely will the tool of the tyranny pervert the plain meaning of words."

In his book, Render Unto Caesar, Archbishop Chaput writes, "We need to be very forceful in clarifying what the words in our political vocabulary really mean. Words are important because they shape our thinking, and our thinking drives our actions. When we subvert the meaning of words like "the common good" or "conscience" or "community" or "family," we undermine the language that sustains our thinking about the law. Dishonest language leads to dishonest debate and bad laws."

"Here's an example. We need to remember that tolerance is not a Christian virtue. Charity, justice, mercy, prudence, honesty -- these are Christian virtues. And obviously, in a diverse community, tolerance is an important working principle. But it's never an end itself. In fact, tolerating grave evil within a society is itself a form of serious evil. Likewise, democratic pluralism does not mean that Catholics should be quiet in public about serious moral issues because of some misguided sense of good manners. A healthy democracy requires vigorous moral debate to survive. Real pluralism demands that people of strong beliefs will advance their convictions in the public square -- peacefully, legally and respectfully, but energetically and without embarrassment. Anything less is bad citizenship and a form of theft from the public conversation."

Also in his writing Archbishop Chaput wrote of the "importance of Catholics witnessing their faith vigorously in public life -- not simply as a matter of good citizenship, but also as an obligation of the Gospel." If we know the truth of the source and intent of America's Constitutional freedoms and know the truth of the Bible and our Church, we can speak those truths and teach them to others. Then we will give witness to our faith so openly and confidently that we become examples of the faithful Americans our founders envisioned and the good stewards of the gifts of freedom from our Father in heaven.

Fortnight events in the Diocese of Rockville Centre include:

-Bishop Brennan will celebrate the closing Mass of the Fortnight at 12:15pm on July 4 at the St. Agnes Cathedral, 29 Quealy Pl, Rockville Centre, NY 11570.

-Check your church bulletin, Telecare TV and www.LICatholic.org for more information about the Fortnight.

Bulletin Reflection

Saints Peter & Paul worked tirelessly to spread the Gospel. Not all can be apostles, but we, too, must be good stewards of our vocations, using the gifts we've been given in the service of God's kingdom.

The Jesus Question – Matthew Kelly

Jesus was walking along the road one day with his disciples when he asked them two questions. The first question: "Who do people say that I am?" The second question: "Who do you say that I am?" Matthew Kelly calls this second question THE JESUS QUESTION. How you answer this question will affect every aspect of your life.
